the two sets, the older or the younger, were more proficient at the game. Each faction claims its superiority and regards the eucheristic attainments (good expression, eh?) of the other with calm disdain. To settle the question for all eternity it is likely that within the next few days the great contest will come off, and there will be flashing diamonds, anxious hearts, organized euchre clubs, and spades to bury the feelings of remorse which will dim the happiness of the losing side. The idea is decidedly great.
